
Campus Network Policy

Since access to the Duquesne University network is a privilege, not a right, failure to comply with these guidelines may result in loss of network privileges or judicial action.

1. The Duquesne Network is intended to support the academic, educational, and research efforts of the students, faculty, and staff of Duquesne University. Only authorized individuals of the university community are entitled to use it. It may not be used to:
 - o support a commercial enterprise
 - o advertise a commercial business
 - o support a personal business
2. You may not use the network to engage in software piracy or copyright infringement. This includes but is not limited to distribution of copyrighted music using MP3 technology.
3. The individual assigned to a given network connection or IP address is responsible for all activity originating from it. If someone else is using your computer, do not permit them to violate these rules. You will be held responsible for their actions.
4. You may not tamper with the network wiring or hardware on campus other than that which is in your computer. If there is a problem with your network connection, report it to the Help Desk at x4357.
5. All individuals must register their computer for use on the Duquesne Network with CTS. Under NO circumstances may a computer connected to the Duquesne Network use an IP address other than that which is assigned to it by CTS.

No server of any sort may be run on the Duquesne Network other than those sanctioned by CTS. This includes, but is not limited to game servers, Windows NT Servers, Novell NetWare Servers, OS X Servers, or any form of Unix or Linux in a server configuration. In the event that a computer begins sending signals to the network that are disruptive to the operation of the network, the connection to that computer will automatically be disabled. This includes, but is not limited to, running services such as DNS, DHCP, BOOTP, WINS, FTP, or HTTP. The individual will be responsible for correcting the problem, and demonstrating to CTS technical staff

I have read and accept the terms of Duquesne University's Campus Network Policy.
